DID UP OFFICER AKAU
SERGEANT AND CORPORAL FINED BY JUDGE WILCOX.

They and Some Other Soldiers From Camp McKinley Created a Disturbance Last Saturday Night.

The military and the police had a sweeping contest this morning before Police Judge Wilcox. The soldiers outnumbered the police department four to one but the court reserved its decision until later in the day. The case was that against H. H. Bennett, V. W. Strand, Corporal A. Scanlon and Sergeant W. Griffith charged with assault and battery upon Police Officer O. K. Akau.

According to the story told by Akau the men were causing a disturbance on Hotel street Saturday night after the theater and he ordered them to move on. They went inauka on Fort street to the corner of King and there began more noise. The officer followed them and ordered them to desist and Sergeant Griffith applied an oprobrious epithet to him. The officer then placed him under arrest. Akau was set upon by Griffith and the other defendants knocked down and kicked and beaten about his face and body. W. I. Sabin identified Griffith and Bennett as two of the men whom he had seen coming from the crowd that had attacked the officer.

The defendants who were defended by Messrs. Hankey and Strauss denied having sworn at the officer or having caused any disturbance. All were unanimous in declaring that when the officer placed his hand on Griffith's collar Akau did not tell the soldier he was under arrest.

Griffith admitted that after the officer caught hold of him he threw the officer down and squeezed Akau's throat until he had a chance to escape. The court took the case under advisement and in the afternoon fined Griffith and Scanlon $25 and costs each and discharged the other two.
